

Become an Advocate Leader and use your voice for good

OCRA
ovarian cancer
research alliance

OCRA is the voice for the ovarian cancer community, engaging with legislators to ensure that federal funding, patient safety, and access to high-quality care are protected on Capitol Hill. But we're only as strong as our team of Advocate Leaders who champion the cause both in D.C. and at home.

Get trained to become an OCRA Advocate Leader today. Learn more at ocrahope.org/advocacy or email info@ocrahope.org

As an OCRA Advocate Leader, you will:

Receive training to learn how to be an effective advocate and gain understanding of important issues facing the community

Mentor advocates at the Ovarian Cancer National Conference

Respond to Action Alerts from OCRA

Attend Spring Advocacy Day in Washington, D.C., to meet with elected officials, foster relationships with their staff, and personify the plight of ovarian cancer survivors
